

August 28, 1965

Press Seminar For Africans

A pioneer program to foster daily newspapers in the new nations of Africa will begin Sept. 2 at the American Press Institute of Columbia University.

Fifteen African news executives will join their American counterparts in a two-month seminar devoted to advanced management training.

The seminar is sponsored by the Ford Foundation. The program will include 3½ weeks of technical and professional work at the Institute, one week of studying news coverage in Washington, and special case studies of newspapers in Bethlehem, Pa.; Columbus and Franklin, Ind.; Louisville, Ky.; and Charlotte, N. C.

Several of the countries or areas participating in the Seminar are preparing for establishment of their first daily newspapers. The seminar members are:

Timothy Olufunmi Adebajo, editor, Daily Express, Lagos, Nigeria.

Abiodun Alboba, editor-in-chief, Morning Post and Sunday Post, Lagos, Nigeria.

Joseph David Chileshe, public relations officer, Anglo American Corporation, Benin City, Nigeria.

Gab Igbonekwu Idigo, editor, Nigerian Outlook, Enugu, Nigeria.

Emmanuel Adagogo Jaja, executive manager, Daily Times of Nigeria, Lagos, Nigeria.

John Ginwala Kamwendo, business manager and advertising manager, Malawi News, Blantyre, Malawi.

Charles Katende, editor, Munino, Kampala, Uganda.

Cyprien Kayumba, director, Essor du Katanga, Elisabethville, Congo-Leopoldville.

Nathan Bekansa Matovu, chief information officer, The Kabaka's Government, Kampala, Uganda.

Hasim Iddi Mbita, senior press officer, Government Information Services, Dar es Salaam, Tanzania.

Henri Alphonse Mendy, director, Senegalese Press Agency, Dakar, Senegal.

Titus Benson Mukupo, director, Zambia Information Services, Ministry of Information and Post, and chairman of the board, Central African Mail, Lusaka, Zambia.

Patrick Cuthbert Patnelli, editor, Sierra Leone Daily Mail, Freetown, Sierra Leone.

Berhanu Tibebe, sub-editor, Ethiopian Herald, Addis Ababa.